
Children's Defenses Against Painful Affect: The Case of Philip and an Introduction to Regulation-Focused Psychotherapy for Children

Presented by:
Leon Hoffman, MD & Timothy Rice, MD

Program Description

Psychoanalytic interventions occur in manualized short-term psychodynamic psychotherapy through the Regulation Focused Psychotherapy approach. In this presentation, Drs. Leon Hoffman and Timothy Rice will review the history of the psychoanalytic technique of interpreting defenses against painful affect with children, demonstrate its effectiveness in the case history of Philip, a six-year-and-five-month old boy who was felt to be autistic, and introduce the Regulation Focused Psychotherapy project. A discussion on the benefits to the analytic and academic communities of incorporating psychoanalytic interventions within testable manualized approaches as well as models for formulation and intervention in children with autism spectrum disorders will follow with audience participation and conversation.

Children's Defenses Against Painful Affect: The Case of Philip and an Introduction to Regulation-Focused Psychotherapy for Children

Presented by:
Leon Hoffman, MD & Timothy Rice, MD

Biographies

Leon Hoffman, MD is a child and adolescent psychiatrist, and training and supervising analyst in adult, child and adolescent analysis. He is Co-Director of the Pacella Research Center at New York Psychoanalytic Society and Institute and Chief Psychiatrist of West End Day School in NYC. Over the last 15-20 years, he has become very active in the systematic empirical study of basic psychological constructs as well as the systematic empirical study of psychological treatments, especially with children. RFP-C operationalizes Dr. Hoffman's long-standing clinical approach for children who present with externalizing behaviors. Dr. Hoffman has written extensively about the importance and process of defense interpretation with children and has served as the primary supervisor for study therapists who work on RFP-C projects.

Timothy Rice, M.D., is a child, adolescent, and adult psychiatrist and psychoanalyst in practice in New York, NY. He is an Associate Professor of Psychiatry at the Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai and Co-Chair of the Child Division at the Columbia University Center for Psychoanalytic Training and Research.

EDUCATIONAL OBJECTIVES
