This case presentation will focus on the child's clinical material which demonstrates the impact of traumatic experiences on her immature ego and forward movement developmentally and how the analyst's interventions address these two intertwined processes.

Rex McGehee, MD, is a training and supervising analyst at the Denver Psychoanalytic Institute where he is the past Director. He is geographic rule supervisor at the Minneapolis and San Diego Institutes. With Rick Hall, he is the organizer for the Western Consortium for Child Analysis. Dr. McGehee is Associate Clinical Professor of Psychiatry at the University of Colorado School of Medicine. He is also in the private practice of psychoanalysis and psychotherapy with children, adolescents and adults.

EDUCATIONAL OBJECTIVES

At the end of this presentation, participants will be able to:

1. Illustrate how psychoanalysis can provide a safe space to rework traumatic experiences to support progressive developmental movement.
2. Identify interventions which help relieve the psychological burden preventing forward movement developmentally.
3. Discuss indications for when psychoanalysis is a useful treatment for childhood trauma.
