PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

This series will present films that portray psychological trauma and consider the myriad of ways that psychoanalytic thought contributes to our ways of understanding psychological trauma and its sequella in both children and adults.

EDUCATIONAL OBJECTIVES

At the end of this presentation, participants will be able to:

1. Describe at least three ways that psychological trauma is presented in film and how this presentation affects the audience.
2. Describe the ways psychoanalytic thought contributes to our understanding of trauma and its mechanisms of action on the human mind.
3. Describe the ways psychoanalytic thought contributes to our understanding of the sequella of psychological trauma and how it differs in children and adults.
